September 2017

Dear colleague

Pearson qualifications on performance tables in England (2019 results) Information for Schools – September 2017

At the start of this term, the DfE finalised performance tables in England for 2019 results. We're writing to confirm which Pearson qualifications are included and what the next steps are for any submissions where the DfE has asked for further changes.

What's available on Lists from Pearson

We are pleased that Pearson qualifications across a wide range of subjects are now available for teaching in September 2017 and approved by the DfE, which means both teachers' and students' achievements will be fully recognised in 2019 results.

In a small number of subject areas, you'll see that some of our new qualifications have not yet fully met the requirements. Our development teams are working hard to make the changes the government requires; in most cases, we can offer schools alternatives which are approved on performance tables for 2019 results and available to teach this term.

To make it as simple as possible for teachers to know what's included on performance tables, we've created a complete list on our website which covers 2018 and 2019 results. We'll add qualifications for 2020 as we submit them to the DfE.

March and June 2017 submissions for 2019 tables: a summary

We submitted some qualifications during the spring and summer terms 2017, and we're aware many teachers have been waiting for the DfE to confirm whether they will be included on performance tables for 2019 results.

For easy reference, here's a summary of just those titles showing which are approved and which are in redevelopment for the 2020 tables.

Here to help

You can find a full list of qualifications from all Awarding Organisation approved for inclusion in the 2019 School and College performance tables (2019 results) on the DfE website. Please contact Pearson if you have any queries about Pearson titles included in any of the DfE performance tables.
